

Unnayan Katha

The play is about corporate intervention into Indian agriculture. It has portrayed the failure of Green revolution in India except the fact that Green revolution was responsible for the increase of food production. The increase in production of food did not serve the people living below poverty line. Starvation and malnourishment are still there in the lives of the people marginalized socially and economically. The play has also addressed the severe damaged cause by the Green revolution. The focal point of the play is that the proposed “Second Green Revolution” in agriculture is a corporate agenda which is based on their own logic of profit. The play will be performed by some satellite group of Jana Sanskriti and the intervention of the spect-actors will be documented for everyone to see how people want to develop their agriculture.
